

What is a Student Submission?

There are no specific guidelines on the content of a Student Submission. However, the article should be on an OBM-related topic, and be referenced. Student Submissions should preferably be short literature surveys on specific topics. Some examples of relevant topics might include:

"How To" articles on one popular independent variable in OBM (prompts, feedback, goal-setting, rewards, etc.)

Ethics in OBM

Social validation methods in OBM

Comparisons between applied approaches in OBM

What classes to take as an undergraduate to prepare for a career in OBM.

If you have a data-based article, you should consider submitting it to the OBM Network Newsletter first.

Submitting your Student Article

The process:

1. The article should preferably not exceed 600 words, excluding Bio and References.
2. Submit your Student Submission electronically to Siggi Sigurdsson, Marketing and Public Relations Coordinator for the OBM Network, at siggi.sigurdsson@wmich.edu. We also invite you to write a 1-3 line bio/affiliation to appear directly before your article on the web.
3. If necessary, an OBM Network officer will provide comments/suggestions and return the submission to you for your review. You should then make the revisions or comments and return to step 2.
4. Your Student Submission is published at OBMNetwork.com.
5. You have a web publication!
